Question: Do the common path of egress travel requirements of Section 1014.3 apply to buildings where only one exit is required?

Answer:

No, the common path of egress travel requirements of Section 1014.3 do not apply to buildings where only one exit is required. Where only one exit is required to be provided from any building, the need to determine common path of egress travel distances for multiple exits is eliminated.

This is in accordance with Section 101A9.1, Order of Precedence, which notes that where a specific provision varies from a general provision, the specific provision shall apply.
